CCT Venues Appoints Shane Fowler as Head Chef for New Conference Centre

CCT Venues, the conference and training venue specialists, has appointed Shane Fowler as the head chef of its new conference, meeting and training venue in Canary Wharf, London.

The venue will be launched on July 10 and Shane will take charge of a restaurant serving up to 250 delegates a day in an eye-catching atrium overlooking the river.

He will be responsible for planning and managing a wide variety of lunch and special event menus, and will be assisted by his kitchen team.

He was previously with contract caterers, Avenance, where he was the hospitality chef, based at 30 St Mary's Axe (affectionately known as the Guerkin) and prior to that he was a head chef for another Conference and Training Venue.

He has worked in UK hotels and restaurants such as the Green Park Hilton and the Royal Academy of Arts, as well the Stadt Casino in Switzerland and Chateau Lake Louise in Canada.

CCT Venues-Canary Wharf will be the third training and conference centre CCT Venues has launched in London in just over three years. The waterfront location comprises 14 high-specification conference and training rooms, and two large terraces.

The venue offers a comprehensive range of facilities and is the perfect setting for graduate programmes, assessment events and conferences, as well as training, meetings, workshops and other related activities.
